

This is a government for the people and by the people. Given that, I don't see how it could be of any benefit to the people to have more ownership of the media in the hands of fewer people, who can in turn control the outflow of information to the public at large. This is of benefit only to a few rich people who already have a lot of ownership and "power." It is essential now more than ever, that there be more information available to the public, and without the risk of any bias or conflict of interest inherent in any situation where one or two major media owners control so much. This shouldn't be negotiable. It just isn't in the people's interest at all. It is a very dangerous idea in fact.
